

FORTIETH YEAR.

THE OCTOBER ELECTIONS.

Hartman's Majority about Twenty Thousand.

A VICTORY IN INDIANA.

Hendricks Elected by about 3,000 Majority.

OHIO REPUBLICAN BY 10,000.

The Liberals Probably Elect their Supreme Judge.

The latest returns indicate that Hartman's majority in Pennsylvania will be about 20,000. The Republicans claim to have gained Congressmen in the Sixth, sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, and Twenty-fourth Districts. They also claim a majority in both branches of the Legislature, and a majority in the Constitutional Convention. The Grant majority in Philadelphia is about 15,000.

Ohio is conceded to the Republicans on Secretary of State by about 10,000 majority. The Liberals have probably elected their candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court, and have gained Congressmen in the First and Second Districts.

The latest returns from Indiana indicate the election of Hendricks for Governor by 3,000 majority. Voorhees, for Congress, defeated by about 200 majority. The Republicans claim gain of two Congressmen and a loss of one, Shanks having been defeated in the Ninth District.

INDIANA.

Hendrick's Majority About Three Thousand. The Legislature Probably Liberal.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 9.—Last night, and this morning the Republicans were jubilant over the prospects of success, but the official returns received this afternoon and to-night put a different appearance upon the result. Returns from sixty counties give Hendricks and the Democratic State ticket a gain of 2,700 over the vote of 1868, and the thirty-two counties to be heard from will probably increase this gain. The majority on the Democratic State ticket will be between two and three thousand. The Republicans are blue over the returns, and on these that the prospects are decidedly against them. The Democrats carry the First, Second, Third, and Ninth Congressional Districts. The Republicans carry the Second, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Districts. The Republicans are by far the largest party in the state, and it is probable that Voorhees is defeated. He did not canvass his district as close as he has done before.

The Legislature is close. The Democrats, after four gain and six loss, the Republicans claim a majority, but the probability favors a Democratic majority. The defeat of Grant at the State election will give Indiana to Greeley.

The State Ticket Close and the Legislature in Doubt.—Hendricks Probably Elected.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 9.—The official returns of the election are yet too meager to form a satisfactory conclusion as to the result in this State. The Republicans claim the State ticket by 2,500 majority. The Democrats are confident that Hendricks is elected by a small majority. Both sides consider the State to be very close.

Official returns from ninety-seven townships give a net Republican gain of 1,350. Clinton County is reported 20 Democratic majority. The returns from the various counties in the State received at the Republican Headquarters make the majority for Hartman about thirty-one thousand.

The Republicans gain seven Congressmen; James S. Bury, in the Sixth District; John C. Davis, in the Sixteenth; A. Barker in the Seventeenth; Subleski Ross, in the Eighteenth; H. L. Richmond, in the Twenty-first; A. Wilson Taylor in the Twenty-first; and Wm. S. Moore, in the Twenty-third. The Mutuals are probably defeated. The election will commence eighteen Republicans.

With the State Senate stands, certainly, seventeen Republicans to sixteen Democrats. If Mr. Major is elected in the Indiana District, the Republicans will have a majority in the Senate.

The Lower House of the Legislature is probably composed of sixty Republicans and forty Democrats. The Republicans have had a narrow victory in the Constitutional Convention, as they carry all four of the Senatorial districts in this county. Hartman runs up with his ticket in the Eleventh.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Republicans figure the House of Representatives to stand 46 Republicans to 44 Democrats.

Hartman's Majority about $20,000. A Gain of Seven Congressmen for the Republicans.—The Legislature Republicans.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—Nearly all the returns from the various counties in the State received at the Republican Headquarters make the majority for Hartman about thirty-one thousand in the State.

The Republicans gain seven Congressmen; James S. Bury, in the Sixth District; John C. Davis, in the Sixteenth; A. Barker in the Seventeenth; Subleski Ross, in the Eighteenth; H. L. Richmond, in the Twenty-first; A. Wilson Taylor in the Twenty-first; and Wm. S. Moore, in the Twenty-third. The Mutuals are probably defeated. The election will commence eighteen Republicans.

With the State Senate stands, certainly, seventeen Republicans to sixteen Democrats. If Mr. Major is elected in the Indiana District, the Republicans will have a majority in the Senate.

The Lower House of the Legislature is probably composed of sixty Republicans and forty Democrats. The Republicans have had a narrow victory in the Constitutional Convention, as they carry all four of the Senatorial districts in this county. Hartman runs up with his ticket in the Eleventh.

HORN'S SURRENDER.—Forney's Headline returns, "Greeley's Demise Sealed," and says:

It would be folly to shew that Hartman's majority is the offspring of fraud. We believe it to be a legitimate result of the contest. The Republicans have been taken away from plunder and presumption at the south, and now, with the support of the North, are in full support of their cause. His always was stronger than his supporters. He has always been a man of great character which cannot be answered from the principles and purposes for which he gives a little support, and the Democracy of Horace Greeley, on the best authority, is dead. The people of the North are weary of the harmonious action of those who professed reform. The longest time in the history of our country has seen such a mass of men and women, who have determined to join in the cause of reform, and make your position upon the ground of honest and independent government for honest of purpose and independent government.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals were the favorite, but the game of the Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored a run and tied the score. A tenth inning, however, did not decide the game, and the Mutuals won the game.

With the Mutuals leading, the Athletics played a more exciting or desperate game. About 1,200 spectators were on the ground. The Mutuals, though the favorite, had the reputation of both clubs appeared equally confident, and a very large sum of money was invested on the outcome.

The game opened well, and without much advantage to either side, until the fourth inning, when Williams, of the Mutuals, struck out, and kept their lead of one run to the Mutuals.

Then the Athletics scored